9 Facts About Harriet Tubman

Harriet Tubman was born Araminta Ross but adopted Harriet after her mother, Harriet Ross, and her surname comes from her first husband John Tubman.

Harriet is known as a nurse, a Civil Rights Activist, and mostly, as a leader in the Underground Railroad.

The Underground Railroad was a network of people that offered shelter and aid to escape enslaved people to the northern part of the U.S., where slavery was outlawed.

"Stations" were safe homes where people could hide as they traveled, and the people that helped the slaves care called "conductors".

"Stations" were safe homes where people could hide as they traveled, and the people that helped the slaves care called "conductors".

After Harriet escaped through the Underground Railroad, in 1849, she joined as a conductor to help her friends and family escape.

She led 19 different escapes and helped around 300 slaves to escape.

She was so successful in helping slaves that slave owners offered a reward for her capture.

Harriet also helped to nurse injured soldiers and helped on a military campaign that led to the rescue of +750 slaves for the north during the Civil War.
